College hosts science conference

The United States faces ultimate ruin of its economic system if it continues to supply the bulk of its energy needs with oil and nuclear power. Instead, this country must develop solar energy as a clean, safe, and affordable alternative power source.

So said Dr. Barry Commoner, a prominent environmental scientist and former Citizens Party presidential candidate who spoke at Lycoming on May 15. His keynote address concluded the 30th annual Eastern Colleges Science Conference, a three-day forum hosted this year by Lycoming's science departments and students. At the conference, more than 250 faculty members and undergraduates from 30 colleges and universities across the East Coast presented research findings in the sciences.

Because of "exponentially" rising prices, our dependency on oil for heating, transportation, and industry is "cannibalizing" the economy, said Commoner, who ran for president in the 1980 national election.

The amount of invested capital needed to produce energy is so enormous that the economy will be strained to a point where the system will become "insupportable." Commoner told an audience of about 250 persons in an 85-minute speech.

"In nature, no exponential process can continue indefinitely," he warned.

The 64-year-old Queens College professor of earth and environmental science insisted that nuclear power can never be a feasible electricity-producing means because of the exceedingly high costs involved to produce it safely. Hence, he said, the economic erosion process caused by the cycle of exponentially rising costs is repeated.

According to Commoner, resource nonrenewability is the cause of exponential price increases. Oil, he said, for example, used to be cheap because it was easily accessible.

Commoner cited the Diablo Canyon power plant in California. Despite a $2 billion investment, he said, it has produced zero electricity. The holdup, he said, is the safety risk: the plant has not demonstrated earthquake resistance.

Noting that 20 nuclear power projects have been cancelled in the U.S. in recent years because of staggering costs, Commoner said, he believes the drive to build more nuclear power plants will eventually lose its force.

"What is the cost of 'psychological stress'?" Commoner asked, referring to a recent decision by the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals that the Nuclear Regulatory Commission will have to consider the psychological effects on nearby residents before allowing the crippled Three Mile Island plant near Harrisburg to reopen.

Claiming that coal-burning plants can produce electricity five and a half times more cheaply than nuclear plants, and without the threat of a catastrophe, Commoner said, he supports the use of the coal-burning plant—until solar energy is better developed.

The sun's permanency, he explained, eliminates any potential scarcity and, accordingly, the threat of exponential price increases. And the costs to acquire the sun's energy, Commoner believes, will drop with advancements in solar-harnessing technology.

It is possible, too, that solar power can replace our dependency on oil for transportation. By converting grain (grown by sunlight) into ethyl alcohol, Commoner said, we will be able to make "solar" cars.

By substituting the right crops to avoid food-supply depletions, enough grain can be grown in the Midwest to make a quantity of alcohol fuel to replace our oil needs by a third, said Commoner, who spent 34 years in the botany

Meet Lycoming's new trustees

The three new trustees elected to Lycoming's board at the annual spring meeting in late April bring to it diverse backgrounds.

The Rev. Stratford C. Taylor, 43, of Montoursville: has been a United Methodist minister for 35 years. Marguerite Gehron, Rich '42, of Woolrich, has been a general duty and school nurse and an active community volunteer.

Margaret D. L'Heureux, of Williamsport, is a successful real estate broker and Pennsylvania real estate commissioner.

The Rev. Taylor currently is pastor of Faith United Methodist Church, Montoursville. He has served pastorates at Vira, West Fairview-Summerdale, Thompsonstown, Trinity, and Philipsburg, and is a former superintendent of the Williamsport District.

A graduate of Dickinson Junior College (Lycoming's forerunner), the Rev. Taylor earned a B.S. degree from Dickinson College in 1945 and a master of divinity degree from Drew Theological Seminary in 1947.

The clergyman is chairman of the Central Pennsylvania Conference Board of Missions, a member of the conference Board of Ordained Ministry, and a director of United Methodist Homes for the Aging, Inc. He is married to the former Esther L. Mayhew.

Mrs. Rich also is a graduate of Dickinson Junior College. She earned her nursing degree at Presbyterian Hospital School of Nursing, Philadelphia, in 1945.

As a volunteer, Mrs. Rich has worked with the Bloodmobile, in blood pressure screening programs, and for the Lock Haven Community Foundation, the Children's Aid Society, and Rich Manor — housing for the elderly. She has been very active in the Woolrich United Methodist Church, serving as coordinator of children's programs, chairperson of recreation, a trustee, a Sunday School superintendent, and a lay delegate to the Central Pennsylvania Conference.

The new trustee is married to John Rich VI, a sales representative for Woolrich Woolen Mills. They have four children. Her brother, Dr. William H. Gehron, Jr., '38, of Williamsport, also is an alumnus of the junior college.

Mrs. L'Heureux has operated her own real estate firm since 1966. She worked previously as a realtor associate in Williamsport and as a secretary to the plant manager of the Anchor-Darling Valve Corporation in Williamsport.

A long-time Williamsport resident, Mrs. L'Heureux attended a former city business school and the Pennsylvania State University for real estate courses. She was appointed a real estate commissioner by Gov. Dick Thornburgh. She also is a member of the national and state realtors associations and the Farm and Land Institute, and is a past president of the Lycoming County Multi-List Service and the Lycoming County Board of Realtors.

The realtor is a member of the regional board of directors of Commonwealth National Bank, Williamsport, the Williamsport-Lycoming Chamber of Commerce, the board of Williamsport's Main Street revitalization program, and Annunciation Roman Catholic Church, Williamsport. She is a former member of the executive committee for Boy Scouts of America.

Mrs. L'Heureux was married to Stanley L'Heureux, deceased. She has a son.

Obituary: Phil G. Gillette

Phil G. Gillette

Phil G. Gillette, 76, associate professor emeritus of Spanish at Lycoming, died Monday, May 17, 1982, at his home in Port Charlotte, Fla. He retired in June, 1971, after teaching for 42 years at the college and its forerunner, Dickinson Junior College.

Gillette was a graduate of Ohio University and earned a master's degree from Columbia University. He also studied extensively at the Universities of Valencia and Madrid in Spain.

Gillette came to the junior college in 1929 after teaching for two years at Kenmore High School, near Akron, Ohio. He was born April 28, 1906, in Athens, Ohio.

A world traveler, Gillette visited numerous European countries relative to his position at Lycoming. He also traveled to Cuba, Mexico, and Puerto Rico with some of his classes.

His activities on campus and in the community included serving as a faculty advisor to Theta Chi Fraternity, as college mace bearer, as a South Williamsport Area School Board member, and as a member of Pine Street United Methodist Church, Williamsport. He also was recognized by the Boy Scout Council of Lycoming County for more than 25 years of service to scouting.

Lycoming annually gives Phil Gillette Foreign Language Awards at Honors Day to students who show proficiency in Spanish, German, and French.

Gillette is survived by his wife, the former Barbara Stinson; a son, Gordon, of Odessa, Tex.; three daughters, Mrs. William Rokus, of Leesburg, Va.; Mrs. Earl Schirring, of Palos Verdes Peninsula, Calif.; and Mrs. Charles Hughes, of Maitland, Fla.; and eight grandchildren.

Services were held Friday, May 21, at Pine Street United Methodist Church. He was buried in Twin Hills Cemetery, Montoursville.

Pianos wanted

There is a critical need for additional good quality pianos on campus. If you have a serviceable, good quality piano that is no longer being utilized, why not give it to Lycoming? Your gift of a piano will help Lycoming fill a critical need and also provide a tax deduction.

If you don't have a piano available, you can underwrite a college purchase through a cash gift. If you wish to arrange for the gift of a piano, please contact:

Wertz award given

An administrative secretary for the Central Pennsylvania Conference, United Methodist Church, was honored June 9 by Lycoming at the Annual Conference of the Methodist organization at Bloomsburg State College.

Miss Patsy Ann Hartranft, of Harrisburg, received the third "Bishop D. Frederick Wertz Award" for outstanding service to the church. Named in honor of the former Lycoming president who is now resident Bishop of the Washington Area of the United Methodist Church, the award is presented to clergymen or lay persons who have given exceptional service to God through the church.

Miss Hartranft, who received the award from Lycoming President Dr. Frederick E. Blumer, has been administrative secretary of the Council of Ministries Office for 12 years. Before assuming her current position, she was a secretary for the former Eastern Conference of the Evangelical United Brethren Church.

Active in the church all her life, she was a conference youth leader and a secretary at a Mt. Gettysburg summer camp. She continues to serve Calvary Church, Harrisburg, as recording secretary of the administrative board and as a member of the Pastor Parish Relations Committee.

A 1962 graduate of Mankerville State College, she declined a teaching position after graduation to go to work full time for the church.

In presenting the award, Dr. Blumer cited her commitment to Christ, the respect held for her by her peers, and her patience in "ministering" to a flock of clergy and lay persons who may not always be as cheerful as she is. "You continue to show us how to be Christian through all that you do and say..." he said.

Memorial fund set up

Lycoming recently has received numerous gifts in memory of the late Phil G. Gillette, associate professor emeritus of Spanish.

Gifts have been received from colleagues, friends and alumni. Gillette's family suggested memorial contributions to the fund in lieu of flowers.

The remembrances will be used to perpetuate the Phil G. Gillette Foreign Language Awards. The awards are made annually to seniors who have distinguished themselves in the study of foreign languages. They were first awarded in 1966. The fund was created as an unnamed foreign language award in 1960 by the anonymous gift of Gillette. It became the Gillette Foreign Language Awards after his retirement from Lycoming in 1971.

Alumni wishing to make a memorial contribution honoring Gillette should send their contributions to: Gillette Memorial Fund, c/o Development Office, Lycoming College, Williamsport, PA 17701.

Science grant received

Lycoming received a $2,900 grant for its chemistry department from the Spectroscopy Society of Pittsburgh at the organization's annual awards banquet at Duquesne University in mid-May.

With other college funds, the grant has enabled the department to purchase a spectrophotometer for use by students. A spectrophotometer is an ultraviolet-visible wavelength scanning instrument used for qualitative and quantitative analysis studies.

Dr. David A. Franz, associate professor of chemistry and department chairman, and Mary P. Baggett, a chemistry instructor, received the award for Lycoming. They joined science professors from Allegheny, Wooster, Malone, Denison, and Thiel Colleges at the awards banquet.

The spectroscopy society's college-grants program is designed to assist colleges with the purchase of expensive equipment, accessories, or books related to spectroscopy. Of 55 colleges eligible to apply for this program's funds, eight were selected for awards based on proposals submitted.

His internationally known Center for the Biology of Natural Systems to New York City in 1981. The center has conducted pioneering research on environmental and energy problems since 1966.

Commoner's address followed a banquet Saturday evening in Wertz Student Center dining hall. The banquet was preceded by more than two days of sessions at which 129 scientific papers in the areas of astronomy, computer science, engineering, mathematics, political science, and the social sciences were read. Paper topics included "burnout" in nursing, war gaming, attitudes toward women, helicopter lift and drag comparisons, economic expansionism, and more traditional topics like acid precipitation, wildlife reproduction, and aspen's effects on rat fetuses. All of the sessions were held in the Academic Center.

Visitors also had opportunities to view planetarium shows, electronic music demonstrations, a chemical magic show, and a movie about the medical horrors of nuclear war. And when nighttime settled in, students and professors from Massachusetts, Rhode Island, New York, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania gathered for dances and other social activities on and off campus.

"We got very strong compliments and comments on how well organized the conference was," said Dr. Jack S. Diehl, associate professor of biology. Diehl, Dr. Edward G. Gabriel, assistant professor of biology, and Steve Tarnowski '82, of Philadelphia, served as conference coordinators. "The guests also emphasized how lovely a place Lycoming College is," Diehl added.

Planning for the conference began last September when the coordinators initiated a search for a keynote speaker. The final few months were hectic, anxious times for the coordinators, who faced the problem of attracting visiting schools because of conflicts with final examinations and commencement. Their worries were premature, however, as attendance was solid and, according to Diehl, the quality of the papers "excellent."

Therein is the basic purpose of the ECSC: to provide a forum for undergraduates to present research results in a professional setting. Also, for professors, Gabriel said, "It's a way of keeping us stimulated" and an opportunity to exchange academic ideas with faculties of other institutions.

A successful conference required exemplary cooperation and planning. A "control center" table for all conference information was manned constantly by student volunteers and faculty. Other students served as time proctors for readings. Diehl pointed out that the ECSC is primarily a student-coordinated and student-run conference.

Nevertheless, several faculty members at Lycoming beyond Diehl and Gabriel made significant contributions. Dr. Melvin C. Zimmerman, assistant professor of biology, coordinated the videotaping of all presentations. Dr. Dan O. King, assistant professor of biology, and Dr. James K. Hummer, professor of chemistry, were involved in several functions. Dr. David N. Jex, assistant professor of music, gave electronic music demonstrations. Dr. Richard R. Erickson, assistant professor of physics and astronomy, put on planetarium shows. Dr. David A. Franz, assistant professor of chemistry, performed the chemical magic shows.

Research-paper awards were presented to students in six categories: biology, physics and engineering; chemistry; mathematics and computer science; political science and economics; and sociology and psychology. Lycoming students opted not to be eligible for prizes.

Lycoming students who read papers were Gretchen Eagen (Clarks Summit), Steven McDonald (Mansfield), Albert Stoner (Altoona), Charlene Messner (Roaring Branch), Kimbra Swigart (Hackettstown, N.J.), Ellen Talbert (Teaneck, N.J.), Ronald Powers (Jersey Shore), and Daniel Leathers (Williamsport), all of the class of '82; seniors Catherine Girard (Williamsport), Douglas Moses (Cranbury, N.J.), Donald Nelson (Millmont), James Sherwood (Mechanicsburg), William Vadinsky (Round Brook, N.J.), and Jeffrey Wert (Stroudsburg); and sophomore Dann Caldwell (Harrisburg).

department of Washington University in St. Louis. Commoner noted that a Ford factory in Brazil now makes ethyl alcohol-fueled "solar" cars, with alcohol converted from sugar cane.

Although Commoner believes our energy problems can be solved, the attitude of the present administration is delaying the process. Under Ronald Reagan, Commoner said, the federal budget for solar research and development has been cut 90 percent, while funding for nuclear projects has increased 30 percent.

Commoner's speech, titled "Science and Survival," reflected on the precarious position in which civilization has been placed because of scientific development in the Atomic Age.

"Science and technology has to be used in ways to support us, not threaten us," said Commoner, who moved

Alumni profile: Paul D. Marsden '71, oil broker

When he was at Lycoming working toward a degree in social science, about the only thing Paul D. Marsden '71 knew about oil was that it should be changed every 3,000 miles in his car.

Today, seated in a tiny office adjoining his home, Marsden can speak with authority about where oil is coming from, how much it costs, where it will be found in the future, and where the volatile industry is headed. Marsden is an oil broker and oil equipment salesman.

Looking for a good deal on some Saudi crude? See Marsden. Do you need an intricate $5 million oil rig? See Marsden.

All this is pretty heady stuff. Telephone calls to Zurich, Geneva, and London. Telex messages from Houston and Riyadh.

Where is Marsden's base of operation? New York City? Paris? Texas? Oklahoma? No—it's Fredericksburg, Va., in Spotsylvania County.

The 32-year-old Pennsylvania native sees nothing unusual about that.

"I consider this area in the middle of things as far as oil exploration," he says. "We're near what is called the Eastern Overthrust Belt, where there's a lot of 'hot play' for exploration."

The overthrust belt stretches from the North Carolina Blue Ridge on a line northward into Pennsylvania.

Marsden ended up in the Fredericksburg area like he entered the oil business, in a roundabout way. At Indiana University of Pennsylvania, he earned a master's degree in social science. Part of the degree, however, focused on international politics. This landed him a job with an equipment manufacturing firm with contacts and contracts in the Middle East.

In June, 1980, Marsden left the equipment firm. He started a new job in Fredericksburg about six months later. It didn't pan out and by last June, he was on his own as founder and president of Capricorn International Marketing, Inc.

Selling equipment and accessories is still his "bread and butter," says Marsden, who serves as middleman between firms and companies or individuals interested in buying and selling equipment. But his real fascination lies in the arena of megabucks oil brokering. Marsden had a deal pending in early May for four million barrels of "Saudi light" oil to a Rotterdam concern. It is his first big oil transaction as a broker, and he is unabashed in his enthusiasm over it.

His role as an oil broker is like the part Marsden plays in selling equipment—bringing buyers and sellers together.

Paul D. Marsden at work in his office in his Fredericksburg, Va., home.

Contacts in both the U.S. and abroad keep track of surplus oil, its whereabouts, and availability. When the oil comes on the market, Marsden is tipped off. He, in turn, contacts oil companies or other interested buyers and the negotiations are on—with Marsden in the middle.

After a deal is nearly consummated and his commission is established, "I step out of it. All I basically do is get the buyer and seller together," he says.

But in the fast-paced world of oil, that is easier said than done. A political snafu in the Middle East can throw a last minute monkey wrench into even the most firmly entrenched negotiations. And in addition to brokers like Marsden, there may be countless other "middlemen" waiting to share in the profits.

It is both an exciting and risky business. Despite his business' potential for earning power, Marsden says he is not obsessed with making a lot of money.

"I used to lay awake at night thinking about all the crude oil deals I was going to make but I don't anymore," he says. "Now I rarely think about the profit potential unless I have other people's commissions to cover. I just put up my own commission and keep on going."

Despite a learned knowledge of how the oil industry works, Marsden says his original view of the business has changed little over the years.

"When it comes to oil prices, I hope they don't go up," says Marsden, who feels the current low prices will be shortlived. "After all, I'm just an average Joe on the street when it comes to buying gasoline."

Marsden and his wife, Susan have three children.

Alumni host admissions receptions

Each spring, there are a few alumni who make an unusual contribution to Lycoming, one which pays "handsome dividends" for the next four years.

During late March and early April, receptions are sponsored for high school students living in various geographic areas. Involvement by alumni and friends of Lycoming often contributes to the students' decision to attend the college.

Students accepted into the 1982 fall class and their parents attended regional open houses. A few receptions were hosted in alumni homes, some, because of their size, were held in other locations.

The evening programs provided guests with an opportunity to speak with Lycoming students, faculty, and staff.

Questions about college life and academic programs highlighted the conversations.

Of the 82 students who attended the receptions, nearly 80 percent have confirmed their intentions to enroll at Lycoming in September.

Area receptions were held in six locations:

Doylestown — John B. '58 and Nancy L. (Woolever '57) Ernst hosted a reception, the second such event held in their home in as many years.

St. Davids — Since the early 1970's, Barry C. '70 and Lois Hamilton have entertained prospective students in their Philadelphia-area home.

Northern New Jersey — Frederick W. Thul, Jr. '70 and his wife Bonnie served as host and hostess at the Saddle Brook Marriott Hotel open house. Previously, the Thuls held receptions in their Plainfield home.

Springfield, N.J. — Richard J. '76 and Laura Milligan were alumni hosts for the second year at the Westfield-area reception at the Springfield Holiday Inn.

Harrisburg — For the second year, Donald E. '68 and Marilyn J. (Phillippy '70) Failor hosted a reception at the West Shore Country Club, Camp Hill.

Northcentral Pennsylvania — President and Mrs. Frederick E. Blumer served as host and hostess at the Williamsport-area reception in Pennington Lounge of the Academic Center on campus.

Faculty and staff participating in the annual events were Dr. David A. Franz (chemistry), Deborah J. Holmes (physical education), Dr. Forrest E. Keesbury (education), Dr. Dan O. King (biology), Dr. Diane M. Lesko (art), Dr. Michael E. Roskin (political science), Dr. Kathryn M. Ryan (psychology), Dr. Robert A. Zaccaria (biology), Dr. Fred L. Grogan (Assistant Dean of the College), Paul C. Hassenplug (Director of Development), and Dr. Shirley Van Marter (Dean of the College). Representing the admissions staff were Philip D. Christman, Douglas J. Keiper, Mary Herring, Robin Straka, and Ralph E. Zeigler, Jr.

Marshall Raucci, Jr.

Admissions director named

A former dean of admissions at Manhattanville College has been named Lycoming's new admissions director.

Marshall Raucci, Jr., assumed the post on June 16. He replaces Robert A. Doyle, who resigned last August. Raucci's appointment is the result of a nationwide search conducted while Lester H. Dye '38 served in the interim as a resident admissions consultant.

The new director comes to Lycoming after serving as an admissions director at several colleges in addition to Manhattanville. His previous posts were at Regis, Daemen, and Mount Saint Mary (N.Y.) Colleges.

The 30-year-old director holds a B.A. degree from Marist College and an M.S.Ed. degree from SUNY College at Buffalo. Raucci also completed a special six-week summer training program in college development at Cornell University.

Raucci's professional activities include serving as president of the National Catholic Coordinating Council of Colleges and as an executive board member of the New York State Association of College Admissions Counselors.

Raucci is a native of Gloversville, N.Y. His wife, Marian, is a psychiatric social worker. They have twin six-month-old sons, Marshall and Andrew.

ANAGYROS E. CAMARINOS has been retired since 1971 and lives in Athens, Greece. He retired as a U. S. Navy Captain, as well as a General Attorney, Dept. of Immigration and Naturalization, Dept. of Justice. His phone number is 839-2924, and he would be happy to hear from any Looming graduates traveling to Athens or stationed at Ellenikon USAF Base.

DOROTHEA ROGERS BERNHARDT wrote a lovely letter to the Alumni Office reluctantly saying that she would be unable to attend her 60th class reunion. Instead, she joined 30 of her friends on an air-sea trip that included Acapulco, Mexico, trans-Panama Canal, Netherlands Antilles, Cartagena, Colombia, San Juan, Puerto Rico and back to Florida. While a student at Dickinson Seminary, Dorothy took a Belles Lettres course and was one of the editors of the Dickinson Union, designed covers for that monthly publication and wrote stories for it. She is still writing. For the past four years she has written "Trinity Lies Tossing" once a week for "The Sun", and is doing a weekly column entitled, "Dashes from Dot", for the local newspaper. Dorothy remembers taking both Spanish and French under the never-to-be-forgotten Madame Melville de Rosetti-Leidiche at Dickinson Seminary. Her interest in Spanish continues to this day, and she uses it extensively in her travels and at the Sun City Center Spanish Club. Three years ago she was made an honorary "Conquistadora" by the Hernando De Soto Historical Society in Manatee County in Bradenton, FL, for her 12-year participation in the annual Marielito celebration. Dorothy reports that she is too busy and too active to "grow old" in spite of the accumulation of years. She has vowed to return to Looming for her 60th in 1987 with her son, ROBERT M. ANNIS '47, whether anyone else makes it or not!

REV. WALTER H. CANON and his wife, MIRIAM HAEFFEL '57, who have for their 60th and 55th reunions respectively. They are retired and live at Willow Grove, PA.

BESSIE EDMONDS McCracken is currently residing with her daughter in Fawcett, NJ. Bessie had been living in Detroit, MI. She returned to the campus for her 60th reunion.

DR. GRANVILLE K. FRISBIE lives in San Luis Obispo, CA. For hobbies, he enjoys raising roses, writing patriotic articles for publication, handling his correspondence and serving in charitable activities. From Seminary days he remembers "Dr. Benjamin C. Conner's strict construction of all Seminary rules." Dr. Frisbie has written and published two books, Drugs and Towels - California's gold rush days, and Truscott System of Angular Analysis and Controlled Adjusting, a book used in the chiropractic profession.

ARLENE HIGH DANIELS is presently a resident at the Dubois Nursing Home, Dubois, PA. Although she is certainly not in good health, her husband, William, reports that on his weekly visits, she is comfortable and not suffering from any aches or pains. They have been married for over 60 years. He reported on her questionnaire that during her school term she lived in the home of Dr. John W. Long and helped take care of their children and they enjoy eight grandchildren and two great-grandchildren. Mr. Daniels lives in Coalport, PA.

WILLIAM A. KEESSE lives at Ashbury Village, Catonsville, MD. He is a retired clergyman, having served in the Baltimore Conference. From his days on the campus, he remembers the senior banquet.

SAMUEL C. MACONACHY lives in Cornwall Manor, Cornwall, PA. He is a retired Methodist Minister. His daughter, MARGARET ANN FEGLEY was a member of the Class of 1953. He has three grandchildren.

WILLIAM E. GLOSSER, JR. is an emergency room physician. He and his wife, Gladys, live in Mt. Airy, North Carolina, and have four sons and eight grandchildren. He was the clerk of Berks County coroner from 1978-1981. He received his M.D. degree from the University of Pennsylvania and practiced general surgery in Reading, PA. He lives in Wyomissing.

ALICE BERGER LLOYD lives in Williamsport. Her son, DAVID, was a member of Looming's Class of '73 and her son-in-law, CARL HIEBER, is a member of the Class of '63. She has five grandchildren. Her husband, Dr. Lloyd, is of civic organizations and in St. Mark's Lutheran Church. She remembers riding the Toonerville Trolley (Montourville), and then walking up the hill for her lessons in music from Prof. Richey.

ETHNA KURTZ MUFFLY lives in Milton, PA. She is a retired registered nurse.

JOHN M. LINDEMUTH lives in Williamsport. He has retired as Commissioner of Little League Baseball. He is active in his church and enjoys hunting, fishing and collecting clocks.

RUTH WILLIAMS PATTON lives in Trenton, NJ. She is a retired registered nurse. She does volunteer work, is active in civic organizations and enjoys walking, swimming, bridge and reading. She remembers the chestnut huns, playing basketball and life on the 4th floor H Annex with her roommate, JO McVEY.

JACK E. ASCHINGER lives in Mechanicsburg, PA. He is an attorney with the law firm of Thomas & Thomas, Harrisburg. He and his wife, Alma, have two daughters. Jack is a member of the tonying board and is active in church, and enjoys golf and bridge.

W. CLEON BOSTON lives in Picture Rocks, PA. He is employed by H and E Manufacturing and enjoys being a member of the Picture Rocks Volunteer Fire Co.

BURTON E. DARROW and his wife, the former ANN EVANS '33, live in Walnut Creek, CA. Burton has retired from his work with Sherwin-Williams Co. They have two daughters, one son and three grandchildren. Burton and Ann invite their friends to look them up when they are in California.

DAVID H. FOSTER lives in Lewisberry, PA. He is retired. He and his wife, Emily, have a son, a daughter and three grandchildren. For hobbies, David enjoys hunting, skiing, fishing, wood carving, tennis and dancing to bands with the music of the 30's.

LUCILLE KEEFER REED lives in Whispering Pines, NC. She has two daughters and 8 grandchildren. Lucille was a Motor Service driver and on the district unit for Red Cross for over 20 years. She enjoys aerobic dancing three times a week.

VINCENT E. McKEVEY is a geologist with the Florida Institute of Technology. He and his wife, Genevieve, have one son and two grandchildren. The McKelveys' live in Saint Cloud, FL.

HARRY E. RITTER, JR., lives in Ocean City, NJ. He is married to the former JANE ALLISON '29. He retired in 1977 as president of the Teachers Professional & Mutual Insurance Co. He now enjoys golf.

CLYDE W. SINDY has retired as a United Methodist Minister, but now serves as assistant to the manager of Riverview Manor, 1111 West Huntington, WV. From his days on campus, he remembers living in the Angel Factory and abiding by the strict rules under the leadership of Dr. Long. In a note to his reunion class he said, "I love the memory of my two years there and what the school and the teachers did for me. To the school and the fellowship I had with my fellow students, I am eternally grateful."

LOUISA M. ATHERTON lives in Jersey Shore, PA. She is presently an instructor in biology at Pennsylvania State University. She had formerly been a medical technician in seven hospitals. From her college days she remembers cutting up cuts in the biology lab with RUTH BEACH, DUDLEY TURNER and CARL GAMBA.

RICHARD and ELEANOR KEAGLE BOWER live in Chambersburg. They have one daughter. Richard is a radio announcer, newscaster and salesman with radio station WCBZ, Chambersburg. They are both very active in the Cumberland Valley Philatelic Society. They are also active members of the local Audubon Society and the Humane Society for Animals. From college days they enjoy remembering the musical groups they participated in under Myra Bates and Frances Dewey. They send greetings to all of their fellow classmates, especially EV RUBENDALL.

LOLA KURTZ HUBER lives in Montoursville, PA. She is a private piano instructor. She is active in her church, Eastern Star and other volunteer organizations.

SOME COMMENTS FROM FACULTY WHO ATTENDED THE '62 REUNION DINNER:

"I don't know who had the most fun at the 20th reunion -- students or the faculty -- May the years be very happy ones for all the Class of '62. All of you seem to be 'going places' and doing interesting things. Keep it up!"

--Frances K. Skeath

"... It was good to see and renew friendships with your class members and with faculty. Again, my gratitude to you for the opportunity to meet with you, for the laughter and pleasures we shared last Saturday at The Oaks."

--Helen M. Felix

"Multi congratulations on a great reunion! It was fantastic!... In these thankless days on campuses, May 8, 1982, stands as a monument and surely makes what must approximate 500 years (about 25 faculty X an average of 25 years each) of teaching worth every minute of it! In teaching, you've got to get used to 'loving 'em and leaving 'em' (students, of course) because a generation lasts only four years at best. You like to think that they've come to good in the years ahead. Seeing such a large number of the Lyco Class of '62 two decades later was proof that is has, indeed!"

--Otto Sonder

Rumor has it that a jolly good time was had by all at the 20th reunion of the Class of 1962.

A lot of people helped make it a success: Laurie Jones who handled the faculty invitation and reservation, and name tags; Martha (Rickenon) Kirk, in charge of class invitations and reservations, and overall fuss-budget; Roger Liechardt, our emcee (it is true the guest speaker at our 25th in '87 will be a urologist?), and editor of the newsy information sheets; Lori (Craig Moffat who made all our reservations in Williamsport (Papillon, Holiday Inn, The Oaks Club), and arranged for our class picture to be taken; Bob Schuler who made the trip to Williamsport, and contacted the brothers of Lambda Chi Alpha; John Wilbur who renewed old acquaintances with the brothers of Sigma Pi; Geoff Wood who contacted the brothers of Theta Chi; and all those who supported their efforts by attending.

And I had a good time, too!
